THE GAZETTE. MONDAY EVENING, APRIL 29.

SEWED IN A SHEET. - An amusing though just case of retaliation upon the part of the wife for inhuman treatment received from her husband occurred a few days ago, the facts of which, as detailed by a gentleman of the East End, who declined to give names, are as fol-

There is an American living in the vicinity of the above mentioned localities who, with no conception of the obligations resting upon him as a husband, but totally given up to ruffian-ism, has been in the habit of spending the money which should go towards the support of those dependent upon him by both the laws of God and man for whiskey, and when his brain is swimming under the influence of the fiery element going home, and without any cause whatever, but simply for amusement, beating his wife whom he had promised at the altar to protect and cherish. It is strange to what extent the love of woman will submit to be outraged, but there is limit even to its allabiding constancy, as the facts in this aptly demonstrate.

The above state of persecution continued until a few days ago, when the last spark of love being crushed, and the last link in the chain which bound the wife to her husband being broken by the weight of cruelty which had been heaped upon it, and her pride and the independent spirit of her youth which had lain dormant for so long having been aroused, she told him in positive terms that his inhumanity must and should be stopped; that she would submit to his brutal amusement no longer. The husband, however, did not regard the warning, and continued his former course of life until one day he came home with more aboard than usual, and, throwing himself upon the bed, resigned himself to "balmly sleep, tired nature's sweet restorer," though the sentiment did not apply in this case either in spirit or in fact, as the subsequent events proved.

When the husband had fallen asleep, and was perfectly dead for the time being, a bright idea struck the wife by which she might revenge her wrongs and free herself from bondage. Accordingly she proceeded to pack her clothes, and having finished this so as to have them ready for immediate removal, she took a large needle and, carefully threading it with a large and strong thread, she approached the bed where her husband was lying, and wrapped him up in a strong quilt, sat down and carefully and securely sewed him up in it, simply leaving his head out. Having completed all the necessary arrangements for the successful operations of her plans, she seized the cane which had so often been the instrument of her torture, and began laying it on the sleeping man with all the force she could master, stimulated by the memory of her own mistreatment. The man awoke and, begged for mercy and help, but the louder he begged the harder and faster she applied the cane, until exhausted with her labors, she took her clothes and left for the house of a neighbor friend, where she still remains, despite the entreaties of her husband, who escaped from his situation by the assistance of the neighbors, to return.

Let wives learn a lesson from the conduct and spirit of this poor, persecuted woman, and let beastly husbands beware that they may escape treatment in like manner.-Louisville Courier Journal.
